

2026 INTERNATIONAL DAY OF ACTION FOR ACADEMIC INTEGRITY

Recipes for integrity: Sharing your signature dish

KEY INGREDIENTS

-  Institutional policy sets the tone by outlining your institution's approach and expectations for teaching, learning and research.
-  Nurture good practice at all levels, from leadership to staff and students, to build a strong academic integrity culture over time.
-  Talk to students and staff to remind them of their responsibilities and keep them informed and up-to-date about current and evolving risks.
-  Engagement of students and staff to reinforce that academic integrity is everyone's responsibility, and a strong academic integrity culture benefits the interests of staff and students alike.
-  Governance practices that are institution-wide provide strong oversight and accountability.
-  Risk management that recognises the evolving nature of academic integrity and monitors developments on an ongoing basis, using a range of data, so risks can be identified early and managed appropriately.
-  IT security to provide research and information security, and protect the interests of students, and academic and professional staff.
-  Training that occurs frequently to support staff in understanding their responsibilities and ensure students are aware of what academic integrity is and why it is important.
-  Yearly evaluation of policies and practices (or another frequency, depending on a provider's review cycles) can help to identify what is working and where there may be risks that need to be addressed.

Australian Government

Tertiary Education Quality and Standards Agency

TEQSA
teqsa.gov.au